Voices—Not Always Virtuous

AN ancient Greek," writes William Feather, editor of the Imperial Type Metal magazine, "once proposed that any legislator who proposed a new law should be required to enter the chamber with a rope around his neck. If the law he introduced failed to pass, the penalty would be death by hanging."

"The merit of this," continues Mr. Feather, "is tremendous. Any legislator who proposed such a law in this country would be acclaimed, and if his colleagues refused to vote for it they should be lynched as a token of the public's disgust with the mass of crazy bills that jam the docket of every legislative hall in the country."

Alas for the eclipse of a once-noble mind—the mind of Editor Feather!

Verily I believe he would volunteer to put a rope around his own neck and submit his own life to the whim of the public's representatives.

For the man who launched such a proposal would himself wear the rope—and hanged he certainly would be.

Achievement Day Program Is Held at Hope City Hall

10 Demonstration Clubs and Farm Security Participate Here

OPENS AT 10 A. M.

Pantry Stores Exhibit Part of Live-at-Home Demonstration

Ten clubs and the Farm Security Administration entered the Pantry Stores exhibit sponsored by the County Council of Home Demonstration Clubs at the Achievement Day program Friday at Hope city hall. The Farm Security Administration featured "Things for a Riny Day," Christmas gifts, and dried products.

Centerville club exhibited a breakfast of cereal, eggs in tomatoes, and bacon. Ozan showed several apple dishes featuring Arkansas apples. Hopewell club had egg and cheese dishes.

As a part of the Live-at-Home program, the Farm Security Administration exhibited a well-balanced feed ration for both the production of milk and the maintenance of live stock on the farm. The dairy ration consisted of hammered peanut vines, the ground hogs, hay, lespedeza hay, and Johnson grass hay. For the maintenance of a combination of the above feeds supplemented with corn and hogshead heads.

Miscellaneous exhibits are quilts, rugs, pillow cases, spreads, toys, up-holstered furniture, and hand-woven chair seats.

The following is the program for the day:

10 a. m. Call to order—President, Mrs. Lee Garbath.
10:05 a. m. Group singing.
10:10 a. m. Invocation.
10:25 a. m. Roll call of clubs—Secretary, Mrs. Wilbur Jones.
10:35 a. m. Minutes—Secretary, Mrs. Wilbur Jones.
Introduction of guests.

Special Session Convenes Monday

Slow Start of Congress Predicted by Demo Leaders

WASHINGTON (AP)—Predictions of a slow beginning for the special session of congress came Friday from democratic leaders, who nevertheless pledged themselves to expedite the Roosevelt program.

Speaker Bankhead said he believed it was inevitable that the house would have to "jockey along for a few days at a time" because farm legislation would not be ready when the special session starts Monday.

Homecoming Conference Game at 8 p. m.

Carlene Bruner Is to Reign as Queen Over Grid Contest

Hard-Fought Battle for Both Elevens Is Predicted

WEIGHTS ARE EQUAL

Will Be Final Conference Game of Season for Bobcats

Hope and Russellville high school football teams clash in a homecoming conference game here Friday night in what is expected to be a tough battle for both elevens.

It will be the fifth and final conference battle for the Bobcats, having won two and lost two in the "Big 15." The Crimson Cyclone team will be after its third victory in the conference.

Russellville has won over two conference opponents and lost one, dropping its only game of the season, a conference battle, to Forrest City early in the season.

Queen For Game

Miss Carlene Bruner has been chosen by the student body as queen for the homecoming game. She is a senior. Chosen as her maids of honor are:

Mayor Albert Graves, will crown Miss Bruner as queen just before the kickoff, which has been set for 8 o'clock. Miss Bruner will then present Captain G. V. Keith of the Bobcat team the football to be used in the game, and to the Russellville captain she will present a wreath of flowers.

Teams Evenly Matched

On paper the two teams are about evenly matched. Hope has a one- and weight advantage, according to the starting lineup and weights released by Coach Fay Hammons of Hope and Wallace Bailey, veteran Russellville mentor.

The Bobcat team will average 168 pounds. Russellville will average 167. The Hope line has a weight advantage of five pounds, averaging 172 to 167 for Russellville. The Crimson Cyclone backfield has the Hope ball carriers outweighed seven pounds, averaging 167 to 160 for Hope.

It is reported from Russellville that Jimmy Minor, 197-pound regular tackle, will not see action because of an injured leg. "The balance of the team is reported to be in good condition. The Crimson team boasts two powerful running backs in J. Keeton, 175-pound fullback, and Salmon, quarter.

Hope Lineup Shifted

The Bobcats will be minus the service of Edward Aslin, regular halfback, because of a shoulder injury sustained in the Blytheville game last week. Aslin may suit-up—and then he may not. Coach Fay Hammons said Friday noon.

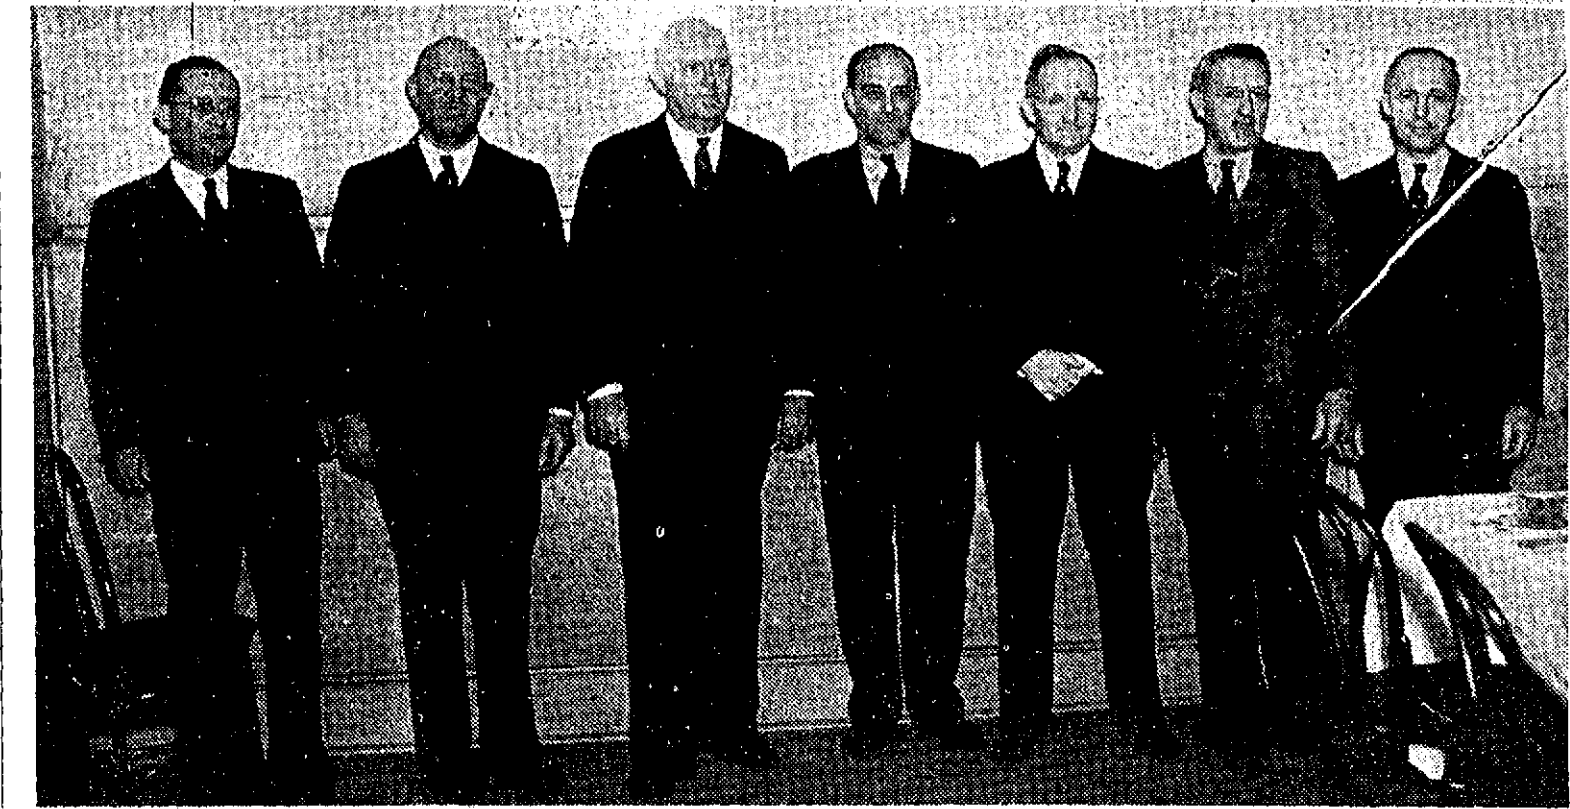

Vaseo Bright, ace quarterback, will not be in the starting lineup but may see action later in the game. Hammons said. Bright is nursing an ankle injury.

In the starting backfield Friday night will be Masters at quarter, W. Parsons and Coleman at halfbacks, and the veteran Joe Eason at fullback. Still replaces W. Parsons at guard position. Captain G. V. Keith will be at the other guard post, Stone and Quincy at tackles and Reese and Ramsey at ends.

Reese and Stone will be slightly

2 College Heads Guests of Rotary

Club Hears Red Cross Appeal, and Vocational Work Outline

Hope Rotary club, at a session attended by two college heads, heard a plea for the current Red Cross Roll Call, and an explanation of the vocational work in the new department installed this year in Hope High School.

Visiting college presidents were, Dr. J. H. Reynolds, of Benton, at Conway; and Dr. J. P. Womack, of Henderson State, at Arkadelphia.

R. E. Jackson, head of the new department of vocational agriculture and manual arts at the high school, outlined the training to be given in the manual arts building which is now under construction. Building of the structure itself is affording special training for apprentice brick-layers, the brick having been donated by N. P. O'Neal of Hope Brick company.

The Red Cross appeal was presented by the Rev. Bert Webb, city chairman of the roll call, and Wayne H.

Bishop's Crusade to Recover Youth, Declares Moore

"Movies Have Gotten Hold of Youth by the Millions"

1938 LIQUOR FIGHT

Lone Opponent of Unification Plan Withdraws His "No" Vote

Bishop John M. Moore charged that "The movies have gotten hold of our young people by the millions," speaking to the Little Rock Methodist conference here Friday.

He included his remarks in reference to the Bishop's Crusade of 1938 in connection with the Aldersgate Commemoration.

"So many of our young people are attending Sunday school Sunday after Sunday without getting any religion," the bishop said.

"We have lost the hold on our young people. The movies have got them. The movies have gotten hold of our young people by millions.

"How many will be in the movies this afternoon? How many more tonight? Their minds filled with what? They're running up and down the highways like they did near Arkadelphia last week and ran into each other. They're doing it everywhere.

"We've got to appeal as strongly to them as do the amusements. That's what this crusade is for."

The conference adjourned its session at noon Friday until Saturday morning.

Anti-Liquor Campaign

J. H. Glass, Little Rock, superintendent of the Arkansas Anti-Saloon league, informed the conference that the trustees of the league would meet in Little Rock in December to map plans for an anti-liquor campaign in 1938.

"The time has come for battle," said Glass, "and what I mean is a real battle."

Afterward Bishop Moore said, "Anytime anyone takes up a fight against liquor you'll always find the Methodists there to help."

Presiding elders in annual reports Friday, pictured improved conditions in their districts. Reported numerous improvements in churches, and increase in preachers' salaries and church memberships.

Selection of J. L. Cannon, DeQueen, Thursday night completed five clerical delegates to the general conference. Lay alternates are:

Dan Pittman, Prescott; Mrs. J. M. Stinson, Camden; Mrs. H. King Wade, Hot Springs.

Clerical alternates:

W. C. Watson, Malvern; J. L. Hoover, Monticello; and Francis A. Buddin, Pine Bluff.

Unification Unanimous

The conference's vote for approval of the unification plan became unanimous at Thursday afternoon session when the Rev. L. O. Lee of Bryant, Ark., asserted he was withdrawing his lone vote against the plan.

Bishop Moore said this action was in order and the conference unanimously approved the Rev. Mr. Lee's action. Lee, in explaining his stand, said quote:

"When I arose in opposition I thought I would have a little support and since I am the lone opponent of the plan I am sincere in withdrawing that opposition in order to make the action of this conference unanimous."

The Rev. H. C. Morris, Louisville, Ky., president of Asbury College, church paper publisher and noted evangelist, delivered sermons before conference Thursday afternoon and tonight.

Tragedy of the Man Who Began Too Late

IF THERE ever was a man who seemed fated to live out an acute personal tragedy on a public stage, that man must be the Duke of Windsor.

His recent speech before the Anglo-American Press Club at Paris merely carries his tragedy one stage further and makes its ironic poignancy more obvious.

In that speech the duke said that he had no intention of leading an idle life. He hoped, he said, to make some contribution toward solving the world's present grave problems.

THE tragedy, of course, is the old, old human tragedy of "too late." For this man who sets out to contribute to a solution of the world's problems is, after all, that same confused, harassed and desperately unhappy person who stepped down of his own free will from the one place where he might have been able to make such a contribution effectively.

First he was Prince of Wales and then he was king of England; and although the king of England no longer holds the substance of actual power, he possesses as few other human beings a sounding board from which he can impress his ideas on the minds of his fellow men. His least word and his slightest gesture are observed by millions of people.

But as prince, this man was noted chiefly for his intimate association with the gay night club crowd. America fairly crawled with girls whose proudest boast was that they had danced with the prince; England had dozens of anecdotes about his parties.

And when he became king the world watched him eagerly—not to get a kingly and a significant hint as to the solution of its innumerable woes, but to learn which woman, if any, he might choose to marry.

He spoke to the world over the air waves, once, and the world hung on his words—to discover that the whole thing was too much for him and that he was dropping out.

AND now this unluckiest of mortals wants to "make some contribution" toward solving the world's problems! Small wonder that in his confusion he studies labor union problems in Germany, where there are no labor unions.

The man who fights with the best there is in him and is beaten by circumstance is not a tragic figure—not really. In this defeat there can be an everlasting triumph. The genuine tragedy is that of the man who is beaten by himself; the man who does have a glimpse of what might be, but who can't quite bring himself to act on it. And that is the tragedy of the well-meaning and likable Duke of Windsor.

Taxes You Don't See

THE farmer pays taxes every year on his farm; if the rate goes up he notices it at once and squawks. The city dweller who lives in an apartment or a rented house pays no taxes at all; if the tax rate goes up he says not a word, thinking that it does not affect him personally.

That the city dweller thereby kids himself ruinously is pointed out in a tax study prepared by Dr. Mabel Newcomer of Vassar College for the Twentieth Century Fund.

For the city dweller, Dr. Newcomer remarks, actually pays heavier taxes than the farmer. His monthly rent payments include a property tax far higher than that in rural regions. Almost everything he buys has a similar hidden tax. Dr. Newcomer sums it up by showing that an average Illinois farmer who makes $1000 a year pays out 10.4 per cent of his income in taxes; but his brother in the city, who has the same income, pays out 19.3 per cent in taxes.

Until city folk generally realize this fact, and protest accordingly, there is scant hope of reducing the heavy tax load.

Mother's Uncurbed Emotions Color Whole Family's Life

It might be a happier world if it were not for human emotions—feelings, in everyday parlance.

Everyone is consumed daily and even hourly by worry, fear, anger or humiliation; or the happier ones, elation, love, pride and satisfaction. There are dozens of others, including the kindly reactions of sympathy, generosity and forgiveness. That these latter are tied up with self pride is another subject, but it remains that most people are "feeling" one way or another most of the time.

To allow each experience we have to eat into emotion wears us out. The old saying that work won't kill, but worry will should be amended to read: "Work won't kill but emotion of any kind will," if it goes to extremes. We cannot stop ourselves from feeling, but we can, with patience, stop interpreting everything that happens to use in terms of jealousy, or humiliation or general self pity.

Suffers Unnecessarily

I am speaking particularly to mothers. Because the attitude of the mother colors the whole of family life. If she is too emotional, she will not only suffer more than need be herself, but her children are likely to be emotional.

JACK WENTWORTH, Jill's brother.
SYLVIA SUTTON, old heiress.

Yesterday Barry and his father quarrel over money. Suddenly the elder Wentworth crumples at his desk.

CHAPTER XXI

MRS. WENTWORTH had been startled out of deep sleep by the sound of loud voices. And then, there was another sound. Something had fallen in the room under her own bed. Her husband's study.

She was out of bed, pulling a robe about her, shivering a little. She went to the door that opened into her husband's room and turned the knob. John was up. That was it. His bed had not been slept in.

In the upstairs hall, she met Miss Dexter hurrying from the other wing, looking like a little gray owl in her woolly wrapper, her eyes round with alarm.

"Then, you heard it, too," Miss Dexter whispered. "Do you think it might be burglars?"

"I don't think anything of the kind," Mrs. Wentworth snapped. "It's 5 or 6, almost time for the servants to come in. Burglars don't break in at this hour. Mr. Wentworth is up. He probably turned a chair over. Go back to your room before you wake everybody."

Suddenly, she realized she was fighting a dreadful premonition of disaster. Barry had been drinking last night. When he was drinking he was always in an ugly mood. Suppose he had gone to his father's study—

"Go back to your room, Miss Dexter," Mrs. Wentworth spoke again with such cold finality in her voice that the secretary retreated hastily, hurrying down the hall and into her own little nook like a frightened mouse slipping safely into its hole.

Mrs. Wentworth waited only until the secretary's door had closed, and then hastened down the stairs. Crossing the still shadowed hall, she stood for a moment outside the door of the study. Then quickly opened it.

BARRY was standing as though turned to stone, looking down at a figure outstretched on the rug. An object, which she recognized dully as a heavy paper-weight that her husband had used for years, was in Barry's hand. "He's dead," Barry whispered. "It was his heart."

And then as his mother's anguished eyes still held his: "Good heavens, mother! You don't believe I did this! We had a row. He was talking about cutting me out for a long while. I started toward him with this thing in my hand. I might have hit him if I had ever reached him. But before I got there he fell, hitting his head—"

"You must get out of here now, quickly . . . and get rid of that paperweight in your hand."

"But, mother, you can't, you can't believe I did it!"

"It doesn't matter what I believe, Barry," Mrs. Wentworth whispered. "You mustn't be found here. Leave the house. When I flash on the lights in the hall, slip up the back stairs to your room. Lock the door behind you. Get undressed."

Barry's face, frozen with fear, registered for a moment before he obeyed.

SHE summoned all her strength, went over and bent to the still form. She placed her hand on the hand that lay outflung on the rug. She recoiled with a cry. It was true. He was dead. People might not believe what Barry said. They might call it murder.

Mrs. Wentworth shuddered violently as she remembered that she must go through the quiet house, open the back door for Barry, leaving the lonely figure on the rug.

But she was already doing it. Passing swiftly through the hall, unlocking a door. Then back, and on up the stairs, to the east wing. She knocked on Miss Dexter's door.

"Miss Dexter! Miss Dexter!" It was her own voice speaking. "I'm frightened. I went to the bottom of the stair and called Mr. Wentworth. He doesn't answer. I'm afraid he's ill. You know his heart isn't strong."

Miss Dexter had put on the gray robe again. As the thought of her employer's possible illness swept aside nervous fancies, she said practically: "Poor dear, and you were afraid to go to the study. I guess I upset you talking about burglars. Don't worry. I suspect he went to sleep. That's all."

"We must go down," Mrs. Wentworth insisted.

They had reached the lower floor, and she saw Mrs. Wentworth reach automatically to turn the hall switch, flooding the big room with warm light.

THE next moment they were standing in the open study door. A scream rose to Miss Dexter's lips, and died there, as she felt Mrs. Wentworth swaying against her; then arms clinging as her employer slipped without a word to the floor.

She bent over Mrs. Wentworth. There, her eyes were fluttering open. She was moving. At least she wasn't dead.

"I'm all right," Mrs. Wentworth said. She got to her feet and steadied herself by the table. "Get the servants, and then call a doctor for Mr. Wentworth."

"She doesn't know it's too late for a doctor," Miss Dexter thought. She looked back from the door. Mrs. Wentworth was moving some papers on the desk. Arranging them neatly.

It seemed a long time, but she knew it was only a few minutes before the study was filled with quiet, sober-eyed servants.

And then, Howell, the second butler, was saying in a low but firm tone:

"Nobody should go near him until the police come. It might not have been his heart. He's had a blow on the head."

MRS. WENTWORTH'S voice rang out wildly: "You mustn't say things like that. The fall did it. There's no need for police."

"I beg your pardon, ma'am. That may be true or it may not be. But I wouldn't be satisfied, beg your pardon again, ma'am, until the police see him. At least, I'd like for Mr. Jack to see him before he's moved."

Mrs. Wentworth nodded her head. She sank into a chair and covered her face with her hands. "I'll wake Mr. Jack and Mr. Barry," Miss Dexter said. "And Miss Jill, too, I guess. Oh, poor Miss Jill. She loved him so."

A few moments later, she was pounding on Jack's door. And then on Barry's.

Jack had bounded out of bed instantly, answering the summons: "Anything wrong, Miss Dexter?" "Your father's ill," Miss Dexter spoke mechanically.

It had been more difficult to awaken Barry. "Drunk as usual," Miss Dexter muttered to herself. But finally, Barry's flushed face appeared at the door.

"What's the idea of waking me at the crack of dawn?" he had queried, gruffly.

"Your father has had a stroke or something," Miss Dexter told him bluntly. "It looks pretty bad."

At Jill's door, Miss Dexter knocked gently. Several times. But there was no answer.

She turned the knob quietly. The room was revealed in dainty disorder. Jill's lovely dress was thrown carelessly across a chair. Her satin slippers were near. A froth of silken things were on the bed, which was empty.

ally upset also. The repercussion will make her still more unhappy.

Then, too, such a person is likely to be unpredictable, that is, changeable. Her moods are apt to vary, according to her feelings at the moment. One day she will overlook things that the next day she will be upset about. One day she will give permission, and the next day refuse without particular reason. She will be singing when the children come in from school on Monday, and cross on Tuesday, when nothing special has happened to make the difference except perhaps that the clothes would not dry, or Mrs. Smith came in with a new dress on.

Boredom alone gets her down. Money worry, the root of all trouble, I'll grant her, rears its head higher some days than others. But most people have money worries, and if it is any comfort to her, we all do the best we can. So can she.

No Easy Solution

No one is blaming the hurried woman whose emotions eat her peace of mind so avidly. If there were an easy answer to these entirely human weaknesses, some author would make his fortune. But this is something that no one can cure except the individual.

One can say, "I can't make my thoughts a blank, but I can fix on something definite to plan for, and let others take a back seat. Stop all sighing, and wishful thinking and self pity, and plan to go over and stay with tired Mrs. Jones for an hour so she can get a nap, with the baby off her mind. No time? Well, somehow time seems to be provided. Strange as it seems, it is not the lovely things that remove our hurts, but the homely and even the unpleasant effort. Besides, the helpful act is the lovely act."

It takes courage to forget ourselves. Calmness of spirit is the only real happiness, and substitution works magic.

A Book a Day

By Bruce Catton

Growth of an Artist in Modern America

A rich, opinionated and gaily colorful book is Thomas Hart Benton's autobiography, "An Artist in America" (McBride: $3.75).

Mr. Benton, famous as a painter of murals which depict America unpretentious and unadorned, tells here how he became an artist, how he tramped and wandered up, down and across the country, how he changed from lily-fingered aesthete to he-man painter of things as they are, and what he found out about his country in his years of studying it and painting it.

Son of a practical Missouri politician, Benton had the urge to draw pictures from early childhood—his first mural was a penciled choo-choo train on the wallpaper of his parent's front hallway—and his matter-of-fact father was considerably disturbed to learn that he had sired an artist.

Studies in Chicago, Paris and New York left Benton up in the air. He became a poseur among poseurs, mouthing the jargon of the studios and trying to convince himself that the abstractions he painted had real significance.

Then came the war. Benton got in the navy and was put to making sketches of Norfolk navy yard. That settled him. He found out that looking at real things and then making pictures of them was better than brooding in a studio over a bowl of drooping marigolds. He went to work in earnest after the war and became one of modern America's most distinctive and distinguished artists.

All of this he sets forth in his book; and what makes the book so extremely

In Hollywood

You Can't Escape Hollywood, Is Report of Tired Correspondent

HOLLYWOOD.—Your correspondent had a very nice vacation, thank you, even if it did turn out to be a busman's holiday. During the past two weeks I drove a good many hundreds of miles, but it seems that I never quite got out of Hollywood.

At first I thought it would be a good idea to fritter away my period of idleness, tourist fashion, with forays to the mountains, lakes, desert and waypoints which the guide books consider noteworthy. But the desert fringes are full of location companies grinding out horse operas.

There's an Ohio river steamboat on Lake Arrowhead, and Cecil DeMille's pirates have landed at Catalina. Studio trucks are chugging the road to Chatsworth, and the usual calm of Lake Malibu is shattered by whistles until the yells of assistant directors.

Arrowhead is 90 miles away, but it might as well be in the middle of Culver City. First I found John Barrymore, Carole Lombard and others of the "True Confession" company there. Miss Lombard's whoops could be heard for miles because the water is pretty cold at that altitude, and she and Fred MacMurray were obliged to dunk themselves for two whole days.

Follies and Lions

Moving into location nearby was a company from the Goldwyn Follies. They were occupying the site just vacated by Ginger Rogers. Doug Fairbanks, Jr., and the crew of "Having Wonderful Time." As soon as Miss Lombard quit whooping, the Follies troupe went to work. I went home.

A week later we were driving eastward again. There was El Monte and Gay's Lion Farm. We stopped. There were 235 lions at the place, and apparently most of them were movie actors. The lecturer introduced them by name and regaled us with their screen credits. Then he put one of them through some tricks which it soon is to perform in a Tarzan picture.

readable is the immense gusto with which he tells it all. Clearly, he has enjoyed life, has understood his fellow-Americans and has had an understanding and sympathetic eye for the details of their work and play. His book is not only prodigiously entertaining; it will help you to a new understanding of your own country.

Shirk! and defeat is sure;
For there's no chance of deliverance
For the chip who can't endure!
Sing, and the world's harmonious;
Grumble, and things go wrong;
And all the time you are out of rhyme
With the busy, hustling throng.

Home Repairing at Ozan Under Way

Mrs. John Barrow Landscapes Home—New Smith Residence

Mrs. John Barrow, whose home is two blocks west of Ozan, on Highway
No. 4, is having some landscape gardening done around her home. Mrs.
Barrow has had her front and east yard fences taken out, enlarging her lawn.

She plans to make an attractive driveway from the highway to her garage and to set out various shrubs and evergreens to serve as hedges and protection to the property back of her home.

The Barrow home is one of the most attractive homes in the Ozan community, but the work that is being done will add somewhat to its beauty and attractiveness.

Mrs. Jerome Smith, the owner of the beautiful new English type bungalow which was completed in the summer, is also having some landscaping done.
Mrs. Smith has been setting out trees and shrubs and making a garden with a pale fence. Later, she plans to set out hedges and other shrubs.

Mrs. H. A. King and her son, Earl King, are having their home in Ozan newly papered. Mrs. King has done quite a bit of interior decorating in her home within the past year or two.
The papering is being done by J. V.
Forrest, of Texarkana, and Walter Baber of Ozan.

Mr. and Mrs. G. S. Smith have a supply of composition roofing in their yard. They intend to re-cover their home as soon as the weather is suitable for the work.

Mr. and Mrs. Smith have removed their front yard fence, too.
The members of the Ozan Baptist Women's Missionary Society met at the Ozan Baptist church Tuesday afternoon in spite of the constant downpour of rain, and oiled the church floors.

No regular program was given by the society.

The members of the society have enthusiastically and energetically done quite a bit of interior decorating in the Baptist church since summer. They have varnished all of the wood work and seats and have put new runners down the aisles.

THIS simply tailored frock adheres to shirtwaist lines and gives you a slim, sleek look under your winter coat. Wear it with comfort and chic at all daytime occasions. Made up in velvet or thin wool. Pattern 8076 is wearable for dinner and teatime. Many women today choose a simple, well-fitting pattern like this and make it up in several fabrics, achieving a whole wardrobe from one pattern. The formality of the fabric sets the character of the dress. The tucked bodice and two high pockets strike a note decidedly new. The skirt, too, is slim and straight, giving the silhouette long, slender lines.
The pattern includes complete instructions for making the dress.

This Is How Child Artists Paint

Street scenes, landscapes, still life—even abstractions—are not too difficult for child painters to tackle. Federal Art Project directors in Washington found out when they opened the nation's first gallery devoted solely to juvenile art. Joseph Dyer, 13, of St. Joseph orphanage, painted the abstract conglomeration shown at the top, giving his idea of "The Circus," complete with fat lady, wild man, pop-corn, hot-dogs and big tent. A 13-year-old Negro girl, Betty Sue Kitchens, painted the realistic "Street Scene in the Rain," pictured below. Both children live in Washington.

Weekly Sunday School Lesson

By WM. E. GILROY, D. D.
Editor of Advance

The Christian Minister
Text: 1 Timothy 4:6-16;
II Timothy 2:1-4

A lesson dealing with the Christian minister has particular need and appropriateness at the present time.

The value of such a lesson, however, is for all who will study it and not merely for ministers themselves. In Paul's letter to Timothy, whom he regarded as his son in the faith, and as a man particularly called to the ministry of the Gospel, we have set before us a high ideal for all ministers.

"He must be, first of all, a man of godliness. That is, he must strive to have a character like that of the God who, in his worship, and an attitude of love and graciousness toward his fellowmen in harmony with the Gospel of the love of God. A true minister of Jesus Christ must be an example to others "in word, in manner of life, in love, in faith, and purity."

He must be a reader and a teacher, instructing others that they may also become teachers. He must not look for a life of ease, but must think of himself as a good soldier of Jesus Christ, willing to suffer hardship, and keeping himself clear from entangling alliances that he may be free to serve.

Obviously, the power of such a ministry depend upon those who are under his care. People have a right to expect great things of ministers, but only insofar as in their own hearts and lives they approve of the ideal that they set up for the minister.

The worth, power, and effectiveness of the Christian minister in his church and community depend more than is commonly recognized upon the ac-titude of the laymen.

There is a story told of a church that had had for many years the ministry of a great and brilliant man. It is said that when the end of this man's ministry came and the responsible laymen of the church were looking for a successor, they said, "We shall not seek a man whose record and attainment are comparable to the great minister who has served us. We shall look, rather, for a young man of devotion and promise, and the church will make him."

The man whom they called became internationally known as a great preacher and leader. It was not quite true that the church made him, for he had the qualifications of greatness in him; but even this man of influence could not have wielded such power in pulpit and pastorate if he had not had the strong support and confidence of the wise laymen of that church.

When later in his life this minister went to another distinguished church, his ministry lacked something of the power and effect that it formerly had, because he did not find the support of laymen of similar vision and devotion.

If there be a church suffering anywhere from an ineffective ministry, let the laymen take the situation to heart, not in narrow criticism, not in fault-finding, not in weakening the resources of the minister, but in giving him a new attitude of support in prayer, in encouragement, and if it be in critical suggestion, with kindness and constructive purpose.

The church needs today more than anything else intelligent co-operation and mutual understanding between laymen and ministers; and this can be developed by a careful study of such lessons as this.

R. Milburn Injury

Thursday morning in federal district court, was continued until 10:30 a. m.
Friday, as the plaintiff's counsel near-ed completion of its testimony.

Judge Heartsill Ragon of the western district of Arkansas will sentence 27 defendants, all of whom pleaded guilty, when the federal court opens here at 9 a. m. Friday. The civil suit will continue at 10:30 a. m.

When court recessed late Thursday afternoon, the plaintiff's counsel still was presenting testimony, but it was thought that this would be completed shortly after the case is resumed Friday morning.

The plaintiff seeks $60,000 damages for injuries allegedly received last June 11 when the car he was driving was in collision with a truck operated by the defendant concern. Milburn claimed that he received permanent disability, leaving him an invalid. The mishap occurred at Hope, Ark.

be made. In the program of expansion of the work of the Sunday school and church some new classes will begin their work next Sunday. A large attendance in every class will do much to start off the enlarged work in such a manner as to encourage the leaders and glorify the Lord.

The pulpit Sunday morning will be filled by a visiting Methodist pastor attending the Little Rock Conference

NO DEFENSE UNBALANCED

If you have been keeping up with football news lately, no doubt you have read that several well-known gridiron instructors have expressed the opinion that such unorthodox measures as the five-man line have gained the upper hand this season to the extent of the game becoming unbalanced in favor of the defense.

The Southwest conference is a high scoring league and it is difficult for coaches to fashion a defense to hold teams scoreless.

*****

In a dispatch from Fayetteville, Coach Thomson says:

"My team has just finished its six game Southwest conference schedule. We were defending champions. Arkansas scored 100 points for an average of 16 2/3 a game. Yet the best we got were three wins, two defeats and a tie. Speaking of offensive tactics, the Razorbacks have given and taken this season."

"Against Rice (the Owls won 26 to 20) Coach Jimmy Kitts, of the Institute and I tried everything we had heard about to stop the scoring. What a battle of offensive power the fans saw that day. Defense certainly took a licking the entire 60 minutes."

"Last season the Porkers scored 80 points against six conference opponents and won five games and lost one to win the championship."

*****

There have been weeping and wailing among some old-timers because the goal from field isn't the popular weapon it used to be in football.

Nevertheless more than three dozen college football games have been decided this fall by this kicking margin. Only last Saturday Baylor's hopes of an unbeaten season went for naught when Hugh Wolfe of Texas, booted a 26-yard field goal.

The same day Alabama was tied up with Tulane until the final minutes of play when Sandy Sanford came through with a 23-yard field goal that kept Alabama among the unbeaten teams.

Centenary defeated Texas Christian and Washington humbled Lehigh in recent games by field goals.

Panthers' Attack Gets Under Way

Texas Aggies Rated to Beat Owls—Arkansas to Whip Ole Miss

By HARRY GRAYSON
NEA Service Sports Editor

Nebraska's in-and-out Cornhuskers are due for a rather unpleasant afternoon in Pittsburgh, November 13.

In 15 short minutes last Saturday at South Bend, Jack Sutherland's mighty Pitt Panthers exploded the greatest display of sheer power any team has unleashed this season, and finally appear to have established themselves as the standard team in the nation.

In completely crushing Notre Dame 21-6, Sutherland's proteges gave every indication that Nebraska no longer should prove much of a stumbling block in the Panthers' road to the Rose Bowl.

The Cornhuskers, who were tied 13-13 by Kansas last Saturday, always play their fiercest football against Pitt, but this is one time that the odds seem too large to overcome.

Not only did the Panthers prove they have a legitimate claim to the soundest running attack in the business, but they demonstrated they can pass when necessary—and pass with finesse.

Three out of seven aerials were completed by Pitt, with the feature pass going from Goldberg to Hoffman for the Panthers' first score.

Pitt Favored—Going Away

Nebraska's own hope for little success against that hard-charging Pitt line and a pile-driving versatile backfield led by Marshall Goldberg and Harold Stebbins. It looks like a two-touchdown margin for Pitt, by a conservative estimate.

In another choice game listed for the east, Dartmouth takes on Cornell in a contest that should be closer than it looks. The presence of Wild Bill Hutelinson, however, in the Indians' backfield is enough to give them a slight edge over the Big Red.

From entertaining a Big Ten foe in Michigan with my vote being cast in favor of the visiting Wolverines.

Columbia must come out of the skids some time and if Sid Luckman can get his passes working the Lions have a pretty fair chance of downing Syracuse.

Yale should have little trouble with Princeton while Harvard which meets the Blue in a tradition-packed battle the following week, takes on little Davidson in a breadbasket.

Alabama, rather badly by Tulane last week, meets Georgia Tech in the leading battle on the Dixie front. The Crimson Tide, also entertaining visions of a Rose Bowl journey, will have its hands full with the Rambling Wreck, but finally should scrape through.

Duke is favored slightly over North Carolina; Auburn is in a swell spot to upset Louisiana State and Tennessee rates the edge over Vanderbilt, in other leading southern affairs.

At the moment, Minnesota should down Northwestern; Ohio State should make a comeback over Illinois; Michigan State has too much power for Carnegie Tech; Purdue is given the nod over Wisconsin and Kansas looms too strong for Kansas State.

Aggies Rate Over Owls

In the southwest, Texas A. & M. must be given the edge over Rice, even if the Owls did upset Arkansas a week ago; Arkansas in turn should defeat Mississippi and Baylor figures to dump Southern Methodist.

Out on the coast, California, leading candidate for the western nomination to the Rose Bowl, barely escaped with a tie with Washington, which may indicate that the Golden Bear "wonder team" bubble is just that—a bubble. However, Stubb Allison's boys are still a hardy and dangerous crew and should come through over Oregon.

Stanford should defeat Washington State; Southern California ought to take Oregon State and a little further inland, Colorado, paced by its brilliant Wheeler White, should down Colorado College.

However, with the season progressing the way it has been, and with coaches staying up nights studying correspondence school courses in black magic, anything can happen—and usually does. So don't blame us if a handful of upsets sneak up on you again.

Blond Don Heap, clever halfback, leads Northwestern against Minnesota in Minneapolis, Nov. 13. Frank Souchak is expected to play plenty of end for Pittsburgh against Nebraska at Pitt Stadium. Frank Kobes looks after one of Army's wings against Notre Dame in New York. Mason Mayne, guard, heads the Texas Christian charge against Texas at Austin. Woody Lipscomb's tackle position will be a good place for North Carolina to steer clear of when the Tar Heels tackle Duke at Durham. Gene Hibbs looks after Southern California flank when the Trojans entertain Oregon State in Los Angeles.

Centenary Loses to Los Angeles

57-Yard March in Final Quarter Wins Game, 14 to 7

LOS ANGELES.—(AP)—Loyola of Los Angeles snuck down the strong Centenary College Gentlemen from Louisiana, 14 to 7, Thursday.

Hard luck losers in their past five games, and underdogs Thursday, the Los Angeles team broke a 7-7 deadlock in the final quarter on a 57-yard march climaxed by a 26-yard touchdown pass.

Centenary scored first in the first period when Al Beasley, halfback, ducked over tackle and race 48 yards for the goal. Birkelback converted.

Loyola scored several minutes later on a Centenary fumble. Loyola's fullback, Jack Lyons, booted out on the Centenary four. The pass back from center on the next play went awry and Bela Andorkin, Lion lineman, fell on the ball over the line. Ratkovich converted.

The winning score came on the tail end of brilliant running and passing by Lyons, Toney de Lelli and Tom Wilson, Loyola end. Lyons pitched a long one to Wilson for the score.

Zebras and Tigers Ready for Contest

Blytheville Issues a Challenge to Winner of Game

LITTLE ROCK, Ark.—(AP)—The annual high school football championship argument got under way Friday as the Little Rock Zebras and Pine Bluff Tigers made ready for their all important grid classic Saturday.

The Arkansas Democrat said it had information the Blytheville Chicks were preparing to lay claim to the all-state title and that they were willing to "defend" their claim against all comers, especially the winner of the Little Rock-Pine Bluff encounter.

"We think we've got the best high school team in Arkansas and we're going to prove it," said the Democrat's informant. "It looks like we're going to be overlooked when the conference title is awarded but we're claiming the state championship just the same."

Such arguments are annual occurrences in Arkansas and the Arkansas High School Athletic Conference was organized with 15 members this year in an effort to definitely determine the championship.

Conference rules provide that in case two teams finish with the same percentage the title shall go to the one which has played the most games against conference opponents. When the season ends on Thanksgiving, Blytheville will have met five conference foes, Little Rock seven and Pine Bluff eight.

All three are undefeated and untied. Pine Bluff will be completing its conference schedule against Little Rock and a win there would give it a clean slate. In addition to the Bluff City game, Little Rock still is to face Fordyce and North Little Rock. Blytheville's schedule still includes Jonesboro and Forrest City. The Chicks went outside the conference this week for a game with Searcy.

Russellville, holding fourth place in conference standings, goes up against Hope this week in a game that appears a toss-up. Camden meets Fordyce and El Dorado tackles Hot Springs.

Other conference teams go outside the league for opposition with Benton meeting Prescott, Fort Smith taking on Fayetteville, Forrest City playing Stuttgart and North Little Rock invading Newport.

Some 25 games outside the conference feature Smackover at Warren, Batesville at Atkins, Harrison at Rogers, Lake Village at McGehee and Beebe at DeWitt.

Fort Worth Retains Both Managers for '38

FORT WORTH, Texas.—(AP)—President Stanley Thompson of the Fort Worth ball club announced here Thursday that the same managers who carried the Cats to the Dixie title this year would be at the helm of the club in 1938. Stockholders voted to retain both Field Manager Homer Pell and Business Manager Cecil Combs. Both men were promised bonuses if the Cats finished in the first division.

Quachita Defeats Louisiana Team

Tigers Run Wild to Score 40 to 0 Victory at Arkadelphia

ARKADELPHIA, Ark.—Quarterback Robert Smith, and left end Joe Arnett, teamed in a sensational forward pass combination for a 40 to 0 Quachita victory over Louisiana College here Thursday.

The aerial game was varied to include Norton Rankin and Captain Ray Richards, as receivers. Nine of Smith's passes some that traveled like a bullet, were completed, and there were only two failures.

The Tigers found the Louisiana eleven to be a stubborn fighting bunch and often were thwarted in drives for the goal. They also staged two long drives both of which neared the Quachita goal.

In the fourth quarter they drove to the Quachita three yard line when, on a third down, Smith intercepted on the goal line to save the situation. He actually grabbed the pass just as it was settling into a Louisiana man's hands.

Smith ran the ball back 66 yards, and almost got through for a touchdown. Louisiana's star ball carriers were Barber, Payne and Cameron. Baxter, Landers, Tilley and Rankin accounted for much of Quachita's yardage by line attacks.

Smith, who in addition to his almost perfect passing was the outstanding ball carrier of the day, Gorum and Chinn played a fine game at guard and T. Payne and Matlock at the tackles. Reed's punting was sensational, two of his boots going out of bounds within Louisiana's five yard line.

An impressive Armistice Day observance was staged by the ROTC units of Quachita and Henderson Colleges and the Arkadelphia national guard company.

Dwight Crawford, made the address. It was Fathers and Mothers Day at Quachita. A big crowd saw the game and the Armistice ceremony.

DEATH ON THE SPEEDWAY

Leading by three laps with the winner's flag only four laps away, Leonard Powell, Negro driver, took the south turn of the New Hammond (Ind.) Rescuers found him pinned face downward beneath the wreckage, unconscious. He died on the way to the hospital.

Brazil Gets Some Unwelcome Allies

Denies Stamp of Fascism Fixed on Her by Berlin and Rome

RIO DE JANEIRO (By Telephone to Buenos Aires)—(AP)—The government of President Getulio Vargas assured foreign diplomats Thursday that its assumption of dictatorial powers was not Fascism but democracy "moulded to Brazilian necessities."

Diplomats of many countries made inquiries concerning the reported Fascist implications of Vargas's coup Wednesday when he dissolved congress and promulgated a new constitution. It was learned that the Italian and German envoys had made overtures to gain Brazil's adherence to the Italian-German-Japanese anti-Communism pact but had been turned down.

Foreign Minister Mario de Pimentel Brandao declared that Brazil's constitution was "neither Fascist nor Communist, but democratic in the modern sense." He made the statement after a conference with the entire diplomatic corps at which he explained the new regime.

Minister of Justice Francisco Campos, who drafted the constitution, concurred with de Pimentel Brandao.

Both expressed their opinions when shown dispatches attributing to Berlin and Rome officials enthusiastic praise for "the new Fascist state in South America."

Rev. Hollis Purtle Is Elected Trustee of Baptist Orphanage

SHERIDAN, Ark.—(AP)—Mrs. D. N. Jackson, Texarkana, was elected president of the Arkansas Missionary Baptist Association Auxiliary Thursday night and the 1938 meeting was awarded Little Rock.

Other auxiliary officers named were: Mrs. E. B. Jones, Magnolia, vice-president; Mrs. J. H. Feltus, Searcy, secretary; and Mrs. J. E. Cobb, Benton, Bible chairman.

The following new trustees were named for the Baptist orphanage at Texarkana: C. F. Walters, Malvern; E. D. Jones, Magnolia; Hollis Purtle, Hope; F. A. Graver, Fayetteville; and T. H. Herring, Prescott.

The Rev. C. N. Glover, Sheridan, conducted an Armistice Day program following Thursday's business session. The association's meeting continues Friday.

Revision of Profit Tax Now Favored

Senator Harrison, Chairman of Finance Committee, Speaks

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—Statements from Democratic and Republican senators gave new impetus Friday to the growing campaign to reduce business taxes.

Grom Chairman Harrison, Democrat of Mississippi, and the senate finance committee made the unqualified assertion that "there must be some modification of the undistributed profits tax."

Other legislators supported the movement.

Harrison Speaks
WASHINGTON.—(AP)—Revenuing of the undistributed profits tax received another boost Thursday night when Senator Harrison (Dem. Miss.) asserted that some modifications were imperative. He is chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, in a telegram to Secretary Morgenthau, indicated that he believes changes would bolster the confidence of business men.

Congratulating the secretary on his speech, Wednesday night about business and financial conditions, the senator telegraphed: "Believe the administration should fight to attain purposes outlined by you to restore confidence to business. Extreme emergency expenditures should be checked and budget balanced."

"There must be some modifications of undistributed profits tax and on my return to Washington next week hope to confer with you and associates and exchange views."

Harrison's committee handles tax legislation in the senate.

Chairman Vinson (Dem. Ky.) has declared the intention of his House Tax Subcommittee to provide relief from any hardships and inequities imposed by the levy on undistributed corporate earnings.

Asserting today that he considered the purpose of the tax "good," the Kentuckian said Treasury figures showed "that the clamor and furore as to the burden of the tax is greatly exaggerated."

The average corporations which retain 30 per cent of their profits, he said, pay a normal and undistributed profits tax of 10.5 to 19.5 per cent on net incomes from $2,000 to $10,000,000.

C. L. Paschal, Ratcliff, small farm owner and former tenant farmer.

Elijah Stephens, Blevins, small farm owner and former tenant farmer.

W. W. Campbell, Forrest City, banker and business leader, former president of the State Bankers association.

Kelly Wilson, Monticello, small land owner and former tenant farmer.

J. H. Chambers, Monette, tenant farmer operating a 40-acre farm rented on a share of the crop basis.

Approximately 30 counties in the nation will be selected for the operation of the farm tenancy purchase program during the first year of its administration.

Total allocation for carrying out the act during the fiscal year ending July 1, 1938, is $10,000,000. Arkansas's first year allotment, based on total farm population and prevalence of farm tenancy, is $487,555.

The state committee will advise the secretary of agriculture in the selection of counties in which loans to tenants should be made and in the selection of county committees.

It will assist in making administration of the program of loans to deserving farm tenants as effective as the funds available will permit.

The committee will not pass upon applications for individual loans made by the tenants in counties chosen. Tenants in designated counties wishing to obtain loans for purchases of farms must file applications with their county rural rehabilitation supervisor.

County committees, consisting of three farmers to be named by the secretary of agriculture, will have the major responsibility in selection and approval of applications.

No applications will be accepted from tenants in counties not designated to participate in this year's purchasing program.

Rogers said that farm population and the prevalence of tenancy would be the principal criteria used in determining the counties for loan purposes.

"It is planned," he said, "to make no less than five loans and no more than ten in each county selected. The number of counties eligible to participate will depend on the size of the average loan. It has been estimated that these will average about $3,500."

"This would indicate that Arkansas's allotment will allow 139 loans in the state the first year. Assuming that the minimum of five loans will be in a county, this would indicate that about 28 counties will be selected to participate."

Cancer Is Halted by Sugar and Iron

Success With Treatment of Rats Suggests Aid for Humans

NEW YORK.—(AP)—Discovery that hypodermics of sugar and iron stop cancer growth during treatment in most cases in animals was announced Thursday in Science, journal of the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

While stopping growth is not a cure, the sugar-iron medicine is important for two reasons. It is one more in a growing list of substances with power to retard cancer. It takes advantage of one of cancer's peculiarities—the affinity of the growth for sugar.

The experiments were reported by Richard M. Bricker of the College of Physicians and Surgeons of Columbia University and of the Neurological Institute, New York City, and Ropal E. Grant of the Institute.

Sixty-four rats were treated. In 47 or 73 per cent, cancers stopped growing. In half of these the growths became smaller. In a few cancer disappeared completely.

But in most cases of recession the cancer stopped responding to sugar and iron while a few cells were still left around blood vessels. From these scattered cells the tumors would grow again.

The sugar-iron remedy was declared to be either non-poisonous or only slightly toxic. In many cases the cancers stopped growing within 24 hours after giving it.

The experiments are "significant," the report stated, because of the high frequency with which the remedial effects could be predicted.

Brain Sleeps by Section at a Time

Compare It to Winking Out of Lights in Office Building

NEW YORK.—(AP)—When you fall asleep, different parts of the brain go into slumber separately, like the successive winking out of lights in a closing office building.

This discovery, made with electrical tests, was reported Thursday in Science, journal of American Scientists. It was made by Dr. Hallowell Davis and P. A. Davis of Harvard and A. L. Loomis, Dr. E. N. Harvey and G. Hobart of the Loomis laboratory, Tuxedo, N. Y.

Electroencephalograms—the currents of a few millionths of a volt that flow from the head—were used to test the meaning of sleep. Pea-sized electrodes fastened to the head picked up these currents.

The electrodes showed that some parts of the brain "shut down for the night" ahead of others. The shut-down was apparent by a drop in the amount of electricity coming from that part of the brain. The flow became irregular and intermittent.

These electrical changes showed up at the point where the would-be sleeper felt the sensation of "floating." The electrical brain power houses, when deep sleep came, were all reduced to a trickle of electricity.

One important point discovered, the report stated, is that the brain signals in the "floating" state, resemble those of "many abnormal conditions." From this fact the report deduced a possibility that some mental troubles may be "fundamentally similar to those of normal sleep."

Meaning—the Most Modern Automobile in the World is the new 1938 Buick—with DYNAFLEX ENGINE and TORQUE-FREE SPRINGING

IF YOU'VE put a sparkling 1938 Buick through its thrilling paces—And tried to say in words what this stand-out car's got—And found to your surprise you couldn't begin to do it justice—Listen, don't think you're the only one!

"It's gotta lotta ummph!" say trier-outers vainly trying to express all the marvelous things they've felt.

"Ummph!" meaning zip—flash—power. "Ummph!" meaning all you ever expected to find in a car—and a great deal else in addition!

Fact is—demonstration, not conversation, is the thing to describe this new Buick.

To say it's quick—nimble—agile is to do only fractional justice to its DYNAFLEX engine and what it does every time you touch off its thrifty power.
